imitative people, but, on the whole, they have made much solid progress, and afford a praiseworthy example, of industry, intelligence, and enterprise. The existing Government bas almost invariably lent encouragement and assistance to the efforts of its subjects to develop the resources of the country, open up new industries, improve the means of communication, and adopt the inventions of the West. If it has erred now and then by some uncalled for interference with the liberty of its subjects, or by devising some protective measure in the interester of native commerce, it is not, therefore descrying of very sovere censure. All governmonts commit mistakes of greater or less gravity, and it would be most unfair to expect perfection from a Government called the Outer Rock of Bustard Head will cease to into being on the dissolution of an order of things which had endured for ages. Considering the difficulties which have beset its path, and the changed conditions under which the nation now lives, the Japanese Government has proved singularly capable and singularly successful. It has, it must seen de far southwards as a S.W. by W. . W be remembered, had a more than ordinarily difficult part to play. Between these antagonistic elements the Government has found it at times difficult to steer with safety. But wit the exercise of tact and moderation it bas hitherto managed to surmount all obstacles and is now probably, owing to the peaceful and yet triumphant termination of the Corean imbroglio, more popular than it ever has been. It is sincerely to be hoped, consequently that since it has contrived to strengthen its position it has not fallen into any blunder of policy such as that attributed to it by a section of the native. Press. If, however, it really bas in a moment of weakness taken a step backward, we trust it will not be long before it recognises the folly of such a course, which, if persevered in, can only result in unduly elating the reactionists and cause it to lose ground among its bost and most reliable supporters. The retrogressive movement cannot prove very formidable however; the Japaness are too thoroughly favourable to a policy of progress to see thomselves drifting back to the darkness of former times with equanimity.

CRICKET. Wo prosent our readers with an analysis of the run-making and bowling during the past viater, and take the opportunity to make a few general remarks upon the season and upon the adividual merits of some of the more prominent. members of the Club. The past season has been one of great cricketing activity; the matches have been numerous. well contested, and enjoyable; and throughout the aerson the practice ground has been the renn for the daily struggles of numerous youths to attain proficiency in the mysteries of the game. In a limited community, like that of longkong, in which the existence of two rival Clube is an impossibility, there is necessarily an absence of variety in the numerolature of matches that are got up, and bence they are usually described as the Club-as a fixed quantity-versus, at one time the Army, at unother the Services, at another the Garrison, and at another the Regiment for the time being. though in each instance the individuels composing the elevens will probably be the same. They resemble, in fact, the dinner parties of a imited eirole, in which the only variety is that in one Mr. Smith meets Mr. Jones and Mr. Robinson, and in another Mesers, Jones and Robinson meet Mr. Smith. It may be doubted, howover, whether this monotony of individuality is a drawback so far to the actual pleasure of the game, whatever it may be to that of the dinners.

Mr. Taylor, if not a practy bat, is an effective one, and he invariably disappoints, the expectations of those who, not having seen him play, think that, ewing to his carious babit of throwing all his weight forward on the left leg, his is an easy wicket to take. POR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in estense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature.

Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accente being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to

To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Thalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000

Ohinese characters, and Medhurst's English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language shoolately requires examples to display the various applioations and equivalents of different words which the work is so complete, that a reference

HOW MAGNA CHARTA WAS SIGNED.

Once more John assumed on affable demeanour, and with a sickly smile he told the Earl of Pembroke that the barons had done well, and that, for the sake of peace and the exaltation of his reign, he was ready to grant the liberties they demanded. From Odiham in Hampshire, where John was then staying, the Earl of Pembroke carried this message to his friends, and informed them that the king only desired them to name a day and place of meeting. The paront replied -"Let the day be the 15th of June; the place Runny-mead." The scene thus chosen was well suited to the occasion. No narrow walls of wood or stone, which in succeeding years should crumble into dust and leave no trace. bore witness to the solemn act whose effects were destined to extend to remotest agesthe victory of freedom was gained under the free sky, the dome of the universal temple of God. On the appointed day the king quitted Windsor Castle, and proceeded to the green meadow which was called by the Saxon name of Runny-mead, situated on the banks of the Thames, between Statues and Windsor Ho was attended by Pandulph, Aimeric, the Grand Master of the Templara, the Earl of Pembroke, together with eight bishops and thirteen other men of rank; but of these, though they stood at his side, fow really adbered to the tyrant, or were prepared to give him any advice contrary to the wishes of the people. On the other side stood the burons of the kingdom, attended by a vast multitude, representing all other classes of the population. So completely was the arrogance of the king subdued, so hopeless appeared all resistance, that, with scarcely a word of remonstrance, John signed the document presented to him, which, as the foundation of the liberties of England, is known to us by the name of Magna Charta. -the Great Charter .- Cassell's Illustrated
